From The New Book

Marks of Lee On Our Land

[Note: The correct spelling, as everyone in our area knows, is McLean, not McClean. The following news release and picture underline is in error on the part of the author of the book.]

Two techniques successfully employed in comic strips are the use of few words and many pictures. The same basic idea has been used effectively in a picture-story life of Robert E. Lee. MARKS OF LEE ON OUR LAND, with close to a hundred eye-catching photographs and brief, attention- getting copy, follows the general into many states on many assignments. This book about Lee, which includes a detailed account of the variety of responsible positions he filled in government service during the pre-Civil War era, is published by The Naylor Company of San Antonio, Texas and written by Maurine Whorton Redway of Dallas and features pictures and background information on the McClean's House and Appomattox Court House.

Mrs. Redway has effectively realized her plan to make her book a traveler's guide to many geographical areas of our vast country. Though most Americans are familiar with Lee's exploits as a Civil War leader, it is not generally known that his wide range of activities took him to some thirty states. It will be surprising to many to learn that he was superintendent of his alma mater, West Point, that he channeled the turbulent Mississippi, and that he concluded his life, respected and honored, as president of Washington College, now known as Washington and Lee University.

The author succinctly capsulizes the general's life in her Preface: "The life of Robert E. Lee started at Stratford, centered at Arlington, gravitated from Richmond to Appomattox, and soared into sublime recognition at eventide." Nor did acclaim diminish with his passing. Mrs. Redway enumerates and illustrates the honors bestowed on him since his death.

Maurine Whorton Redway was born in Roscoe, Texas. She holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from The University of Texas, and was a Graduate Fellow at Washington University in St. Louis where she earned a master's degree in history.

Mrs. Redway taught in Dallas high schools and was a member of the faculty, Department of Social Studies, at Southern Methodist University.

For many years the author wrote newspaper articles about her adventures and travels. Always an avid collector and researcher of historical data, Mrs. Redway coauthored two books with Dorothy Kendall Bracken. They are EARLY TEXAS HOMES and MARKS OF LINCOLN ON OUR LAND, the latter of which was used as a guidebook in the Civil War Centennial.

Mrs. Redway is a member of Shakespeare Votaries, the American Association of University Women, the Women's Forum of Texas, National Parks Association and the National Retired Teachers Association. She was listed in the 1958 Marquis Supplement to Who's Who.

Release of Liability - GI Loans

Each year we print a number of articles pertaining to the release of liability in GI home loans. Regardless of the amount of publicity that is given to this subject, it appears that veterans are still finding themselves in trouble because they failed to obtain a release of liability when they sold their GI home.

The Veterans Administration GI Loan Program helps veterans to sell their homes, as well as buy them, but unless a veteran obtains a release of liability, he can easily run into problems later. A release can save difficulty and worry should the purchaser later default on the contract.

When a veteran finds that he is going to sell his home that was purchased with a GI loan, he should make it clear to the prospective buyer that he expects him to assume all liability on the mortgage contract. Most home buyers expect to be held liable, and many of those who refuse to accept the liability are not good credit risks. The VA will approve transfer of the liability from a veteran to the purchase only if they have a good credit and if his income is sufficient to make the monthly payments.

A veteran who is selling his GI home may contact the Loan Guaranty Officer at the VA Regional Office and request that he be furnished with the forms necessary for a release of liability. He will be furnished with the required forms, along with instructions for their proper completion. When all forms have been completed, and all items such as the credit report on the purchaser have been obtained, the forms and attachments must be returned to the Veterans Administration Regional Office. The Loan Guaranty Officer must then determine whether the liability can be transferred from the veteran to the puchaser. If so, then the veteran is relieved of all liability on the GI home loan from that time on. Even if the new owner fails to make his payments and the matter is brought to foreclosure, the veteran is not held liable for any portion of the debt that might be owned to the Government.

Answers to Bible Verse
